President of German Shepherd Dog Club Writes With

DOGS TO SHOW ABILITY

Demonstration at Van Cortlandt Park Will Bring Out Police Stars.

"I congratulate the German Shepherd Dog Club of America on having so able a partisan as THE SUN to foster a public police dog demonstration."

Thus writes Mrs. Eleanor W. Yates of Oak Ridge, Va. Mrs. Yates is the president of the German Shepherd Dog Club of America, which is helpfing all champions of law and order to give a great demonstration of what these well trained dogs can do. The trials will be held at Van Cortlandt Park during the afternoon of Saturday, August 23. There will be not only an exhibition of several of the exciting exercises that these dogs must face in their professional or official careers but a bench show besides, where, however, the dogs will be shown only for exhibition, and therefore will be on the benches all the time, so that the crowds will be able to see close at hand what these wolf-like dogs are like in the flesh. As they will be well chained to the substantial benching provided there need be no fear of the dogs attacking any one; indeed the trained police dog never uses his teeth until he is ordered to do so or when of his own knowledge he is aware that his master is in the direct danger or the vagabond he has run down is prepared to attack the dog with something else than the usual equipment of the well meaning person.

The trials at Van Cortlandt Park as at Thus writes Mrs. Eleanor W. Yates of

The trials at Van Cortlandt Park as at present arranged will start at 2 o'clock and the first part of the proceedings will be given over to those tests which will demonstrate the obedience of the dog. For after possessing the friendship or confidence of the dog, then he must be taught obedience. For out of obedience there grows discipline, and discipline breeds the sense of duty, and duty is the mother of grows discipline, and discipline breeds the sense of duty, and duty is the mother of bravery. A police dog or a military dog, like his guide, to be perfect must be possessed of all these qualities—those inestimable virtues that make both the dog and the man.

There will follow great leaping contests for these dogs and it will then be gathered how active the German shepherd dog is. The police dog must be no laggard; he must be able to-clear a fence eleven and a haif feet high and he must jump it forth and back, carrying in his mouth a weight of approximately four and a half pounds. For the dog must be able to follow the nimblest of thieves; he must be respective capable of scaling where man the stream of the stream of the law completes what the dogs had assisted to attain.

The value of the dog to the policeman, the soldier, the caretaker, the custom house man and all officials whose calling pits them against the criminal classes is incomprehensible. Less would be heard of gangsters, Black Handers and others of their kind if perfectly trained dogs were always available and in the hands of expert handlers or guides associated with the police of this or any other city.

It is not unlikely that Miss Anne Tracy of Stonehurst. Highland Falls. N. Y., will work her own dog, Fee von Boll. Fee was third at the Deyon, Pa., trials, where neighborhood of one of the town up the Hudson. No one had seen her near her home for three days, but the wanderer thought she was out for her usual walk. Three days had passed and search parties had scoured the countryside. Miss Tracy heard of the thuble and volunteered her help. The proffered assistance of the gallant young woman with a dog was accepte, and she asked for and received an old garment of the missing woman. Miss Tracy had faithful Tee von Boll set out on their thought-to-be useless and forforn search. But Fee managed to pick up a trail, the right trail, as the dog knew full well, and puzzling out the weather worn line. Fee led her mistress to the mountry of these experiments will continue the search. But Fee managed to pick up a trail, the right trail, as the dog knew full well, and puzzling out the weather worn line. Fee led her mistress to the mountains, and there in a cavern was discovered the starving, shivering, gibbering, lunatic woman, the lost one of three days. Such an incident is only one of a score ould be related almost every day work of a single individual and of the work of a single trained police dog.

Mrs. Garrett says that she is not yet disposed to tell all she has found out in her experimental feeding of dogs such as Airedale terriers, where color counts so much. She wants to see whether she will have the same luck with a few more lit-ters and will then let the world hear all about the knowledge she has gained in a series of feeding experiments, which so far have met with satisfactory results.

KENNEL NOTES.

A bench show will be held at the Northeastern Michigan Fair at Bay City on September 3. 4 and 5. It will be under the auspices of the Bay County Field Trial Club. Marsh Byers of Grand Rapids. Mich. will make the awards in pointer and setter classes; he will also take some of the other dogs used for the purposes of the sportsman in the field. All the other varieties of dogs at the show will be judged by Dr. C. A. White of Chicago. III.

Carl J. Ross, secretary of the La Crosse (Wis) Kennel Club show, reports that the premium lists for this American Kennel Club licensed bench event on September 23-26 at La Crosse are ready. The classification is a large one and the special prizes are liberal. The judges will be John W. Hurton of Chicago and A. C. Madden of Chicago and A. C. Madden of Chicago and A. C. loseburn Kennels Send Young Dogs to New Homes.

The Closeburn Kennels has the best of Scottish deerhounds and young stock from West Caldwell, N. J., is being distributed all over the country. The utility of this historic hound of Scotland is being appreciated in every land where there is rough work for him to do. Apart from the hunting or coursing ability of the dog the Scottish deerhound makes a fine companion for a woman on her walks abroad. He is a faithful companion and his fangs are long and very strong.

Get Back in Ring

THE kennels of Robert Goelet were not represented at Newport, in consequence of an expressed wish in the family that no dogs should be exhibited at shows while the family is still in mourning. William Livesey, Mr. Goelet's kennel manager, received orders at Chester, N. Y., yesterday that all the best dogs in the Glenmere Kennels be prepared immediately for competition. This means that Mr. Goelet will send his dogs to all of the big bench shows during September.

FOX TERRIERS SELL AT BIG INCREASE IN PRICE

English Dogs Costing $175 at First Bring $4,000 in Later Sales.

The briskness of trade in wire haired fox terriers in England may be gathered from the fact that during the present year dogs which originally cost $175 have changed hands at $4,000. Some of these dogs have arrived in the United States and others are coming. Anchor was sold by his breeder for $25 and afterward realized $850 at auction: Biddy of Holyport, purchased for about $15, eventually was sold to Mrs. Roy Rainey for $1,000. Malford Vic. bought for $10, could not be purchased at last reports for a bona fide offer of $1,000. Greenbank Selection was sold by his breeder, Mr. Ball, for $10 and was purchased by George S. Thomas of Hamilton, Mass., for $750. And there are others that have made remarkable prices, considering their first costs.

It will be asked what is the reason for such wonderful jumps in the values of dogs of this kind. In the first place there is often ignorance on the part of the

It will be asked what is the reason for such wonderful jumps in the values of dogs of this kind. In the first place there is often ignorance on the part of the breeder or first owner as to the excellence of his puppy; in the second place the art of trimming dogs is a professional accomplishment, and when the dog is stripped to the stripped of the puppy in the second place the art of trimming dogs is a professional accomplishment, and when the dog is stripped to the stripped of the puppy; in the second place the art of trimming dogs is a professional accomplishment, and when the dog is stripped to the stripped in the "right way," according to the ethics of some people, it is more than likely that the dog's owner of a few days since would not recognize his former property after the dog had been in the professional's hands a short while. On the other hand it must be said that On the other hand it must be said that the dog trimmer must have good material to work upon before he can turn out a show terrier, for such a dog must have sufficient length of head and neck and good shoulders, body and understandings as shall make him a reasonably good prospect even when in the rough and unready state.

If the quick eye and the ready trimming fingers of the professional wire
